

10. Nurture a love of reading for you and your child
9. Build friendships and a sense of community with other book-loving parents
8. Turn the isolated act of reading into a fun, social occasion: “We read to know we are not alone.” ~C.S. Lewis
7. Experience the same “reading language” your child experiences at school
6. Gain different perspectives about the books you read
5. Be introduced to and read books you might not have chosen for yourself
4. Read for pure enjoyment
3. Become a model for your children when they see you taking time to enjoy reading with other people
2. Read diverse books written by diverse authors
1. Take time for yourself!

“Book clubs have the potential to promote increased enjoyment of books among teachers, families, and the broader community as well as to expand personal and home literacy practices” ~Alanna Rochelle Dail
